Collectors of work by maritime artist John Stobart came from all over the world for a reception to kick off the first public exhibition of Stobart's work.

The event took place Jan. 22 at The Society of the Four Arts to launch "The Grandeur of America's Age of Sail: The Paintings of John Stobart."

Stobart is considered one of the foremost maritime artists of today. He is known for his mastery of the technical details of ships, acquired by studying drawings and blueprints of century-old-vessels.

Guests at the reception included Wayne and Andrea Rumley, Jack and Sheryl Purcell, Joyce Nelson, Art and Mary Baker, Jack McDonough and Barbara Arons, Marie Rigney and John and Flavel Godfrey.

The exhibit opened to the public on Jan. 23 and continues through Feb. 28.
